ISSUE #6

PHILOSOPHICAL PONDERINGS

I think a lot about how the primary issue facing America today is wealth inequality. Wealth inequality has led to pretty much every revolution in history. It's not even like capitalism is the issue, this same shit happened in literal communist Soviet Russia when the pigs in Animal Farm started getting too greedy. Every day I turn on the news and people talk about different solutions for how to fix America, and all I can think about is that there is only one clear solution but no one will go for it: Tax the hell out of billionaires and hundred-millionaires. Tariffs and UBI and stimulus checks are all just noise. But when you put pigs in charge of the restaurant, why would they choose to put bacon on the menu?

If you get strong, you can move forward.
If you move forward, you'll be stronger. ♥

SHI THAT HAPPENED

Good

- Played 9 holes of golf for the first time in a while and I'm still so nice at it
- Went out with my friend and her Amazon co-workers and had a good time, haven't really drank since camping
- Started onboarding for PwC job which is encouragement that I still have the job!

Bad

- Goddamn dumbass Travis Kelce took out his best teammate Xavier Worthy I hope Taylor Swift breaks up with him
- Almost had to pay $800 in business taxes but luckily we got out of it
- The AI Contract job's threshold for how good the prompts I make has to be has jumped which basically means it will be harder to make money for the work I do and I will likely be paid less

NIGHTMARE OF THE WEEK

I went to play golf with a bunch of randos I met on this app called Clockout and they were chill but midway through it started raining like BAD and I had to walk all the way back to the metro (1.2 miles) by myself in the rain because I don't have a car and they all just dipped before I could ask for a ride and Ubers were like $40. My shoes are still muddy and I was so miserable the whole walk and I had to meet someone for dinner afterwards and I'm just so upset because I was actually playing really well.
