PHILOSOPHICAL PONDERINGS

I've been following this animation creator JaidenAnimations for some time now, and she just made this video that perfectly encapsulates what's gone wrong with the world today. Everything is an app or a subscription or requires deep knowledge of obscure rules and policies. I went to the DMV for a license and got denied because my apartment didn't electronically sign the lease. I was on hold for 2 hours to get my flight changed to a train back in New Jersey. Technology has not been utilized in the proper form to truly make things more efficient, rather it's become purely as a means to promote laziness. True efficiency still requires dedicated and diligent humans and unfortunately we don't pay humans enough to be diligent because we wasted all the money on technology! Such bullshit.

SHI THAT HAPPENED

Good

- Thanksgiving! Back in Georgia!
- Work is still pretty good and I feel pretty good about my contributions on a daily basis
- Eating and working out pretty consistently and have put on a decent amount of weight (very good thing for skinny guy like me)

Bad

- My dress shoes got absolutely fucked in the rain on my walk back from the train station
- On a larger scale, the timeline that has been set for our current work project is entirely infeasible, and while as the new associate this isn't exactly my fault, I still don't know what will happen when we miss that deadline

FUNNY OFFICE QUOTES

Senior Partner (which means VERY high up in the firm): "I am reincarnated every 10 years and I consume a vastly new universe of knowledge each time."

Director: Speaking about what is essentially just a single excel file
"That's the whole fucking shit right there. That shit becomes inconsistent and the whole thing is fucked."
