PHILOSOPHICAL PONDERINGS

My cousin brother and his girlfriend came to visit DC over the long weekend and seeing him after such a long time was really weird.

This is the same man who for most of his time at GT couldn't cook and doordashed every night, played SO much League of Legends, and was too scared to go on Marta.

In my mind he never really graduated from that version of him, so to see this new version of him where he has a nice job (granted he's always been very technically smart), loving girlfriend, generally very emotionally in-tune, it was actually a bit uncanny.

And he met his girlfriend on Hinge, so I was telling them about my experiences thus far and they just fundamentally didn't understand how someone could go on a good date and then not commit to a relationship with that person. Like this man beat the unbeatable paradox of choice. They were both blown away by how I'm still single despite so many matches and I felt like a crazy person trying to explain emotional unavailability to them.

SHI THAT HAPPENED

NIGHTMARE OF THE WEEK

Had just the worst meeting of my life Tuesday morning as we got grilled for that code issue from last Friday. First time I'm seeing some cracks in the armor at this company, because other than that it's been quite an impressive operation thus far. Just a great reminder that everyone is human and we all make mistakes, and furthermore we all make emotional decisions in the face of adversity.
